Community Outreach Programme (CoP) is a series of initiative by Post Graduate Teaching Department of English & Tribal Studies Center, to create awareness about the social responsibility of students to the nation. It aims to teach the importance of awareness about human circumstances and diversity that extend beyond the students’ classroom experiences. These various out of the classroom experiences may help our students in their growth and to become more responsible citizens. Through the purposeful attempts to teach basic values of respect, empathy, compassion, etc., we nurture our youth to become responsible citizens of the future. Further, the Community Outreach Programme (CoP) allows students to explore tribal life and literature and learn more about them. As a part of our Community Outreach Programme (CoP), the students are scheduled to visit Lekha Mendha in Dhanora taluka of Gadchiroli district.

Objectives

To provide students the opportunity to get involved in community service regularly.

To increase student participation and leadership in community-based needs in India.

To engage target groups in community-based participatory research to improve practice or bring social change.

The outreach program helps in personal development and strengthens the sense of civic responsibility in the students.

To enhance student's academic skill, personal skills and civil responsibility.

About Lekha Mendha:

Situated in Gadchiroli District of the Maharashtra State (India), the village of Mendha-Lekha is famous for its bio-diverse, dry deciduous forest, but also for the struggle of its tribal community towards self-rule. Nearly 80% of the village area is forested and under the legally recognized control of the village. The village has approximately 400 residents, all belonging to the Gond tribe. Mendha Lekha in Gadchiroli district will become the first village in the country to exercise its community right to harvest bamboo under the Forest Rights Act.
