Once, there was a farmer who was very disagreeable man. Everyone who knew him disliked him. He was sure to make the most of whatever went wrong about him; and the poor offender always met him with severe punishment. There was not a boy in the all neighborhood who did not feel uncomfortable as he passed his gate; and the poor dog that barked at his geese, or the neighbor's rooster that crowed on his wall, was speedily visited either with lash of his whip or the shot from his gun. The very cat knew his footsteps and slunk away from him in terror. He was a complete pest, as much so to himself as to those who know about him. Every day brought him some fresh trouble and found him in continual 'hot water'; indeed, his very life was made up of broils.

After a time, good farmer Green came to live near him; and, as you may suppose, he was soon told the character of his not over pleasant neighbor. 'Well,' said he, 'if he treats me badly, I'll very soon kill him.'
